In horse betting, the potential payout for an exacta is typically higher than that of a trifecta. This is because an exacta requires bettors to correctly predict the first two horses in the race, while a trifecta requires predicting the first three. The payout for an exacta is typically higher because there are fewer combinations of horses that can win the race. For example, in a race with 10 horses, there are 90 possible combinations for an exacta (10 x 9) and 720 possible combinations for a trifecta (10 x 9 x 8). Therefore, the odds for an exacta are higher, resulting in a higher potential payout.
